

Los Angeles Times | U.S. & WORLD

LOCAL U.S. & WORLD BUSINESS SPORTS ENTERTAINMENT HEALTH LIVING TRAVEL OPINION MORE

Search

GO

IN THE NEWS: VANCOUVER OLYMPICS | MUDSLIDES | HOLLYWOOD SIGN | TOYOTA | MICHAEL JACKSON

Vancouver wrestles with homelessness

The city's downtown Eastside area is home to some of the worst poverty in Canada. Advocates fear the homeless will be swept away as the Olympics begin.

Vancouver's First United Church converted its sanctuary into a shelter that can accommodate up to 300. Advocacy groups fear a crisis in the spring, when many shelters will run out of funding. (Barbara Walton / European Pressphoto Agency / February 6, 2010)

RELATED

Vancouver engineers its own urban dream

U.S. sentences leader of Canadian drug gang to 30 years

By Kim Murphy

February 9, 2010 | 8:20 p.m.

E-mail Print Text Size

Reporting from Vancouver, Canada - Dawn Bergman was meticulous about preparing her shelter. When temperatures one December night in 2008 plummeted to 22 degrees -- unusually frigid for Vancouver -- she smoothed blankets and a tarp over the top of her large metal cart.

Three times, police and outreach workers stopped by, summoned by reports of someone crying. Didn't she want them to take her to a shelter? No, she answered. Someone would steal her stuff if she left it unguarded on the sidewalk. She borrowed a lighter for her candles, which had gone out. The cop handed her a cigarette too.

Quit waking me up, Bergman said.

The next call came at 4:30 a.m., when someone reported seeing Bergman sitting upright in her cart, knees bent, arms at her sides, engulfed in flames. Her body was charred, her airway full of soot, her blood full of carbon monoxide, cocaine and morphine – her soul long gone.

"People living in the street . . . they're bundled up, they're under an overhang and, in the end, we can't force them into a shelter," said police Supt. Bud Lemcke, who oversees the downtown Eastside area – home to some of the worst poverty in Canada.

Vancouver frequently ranks among the most livable cities in North America, with multimillion-dollar condos offering breathtaking views of blue waterways and snowy mountains. But the downtown Eastside remains a netherworld of open-air drug-dealing, makeshift sidewalk shelters, public drunkenness and prostitution. It is home to 40% of Vancouver's robberies and assaults. And while it features North America's only legal heroin injection center, downtown Eastside has an HIV rate of 30% – on par with Botswana.

For many in this city that prides itself on its social contract, Bergman's horrifying death was the last straw. The government announced the opening of five emergency shelters, 14 new permanent public-housing developments and plans to purchase and revamp 25 inner-city hotels. The British Columbia legislature passed a law giving police more power to get endangered people into shelters.

But with the Olympic Games approaching, there were widespread predictions that the police, as is often the case in host cities, would round up the homeless in a final cosmetic hose-down before the dignitaries swept into town.

"I swear to you on my mother's grave, that is not going to happen," Lemcke pledged to an activist recently. "We will protect the rights of people down there, and the world will see what the world sees on the downtown Eastside. The world needs to know."

Officials estimate there were 1,600 homeless people in Vancouver in 2008, the most recent count. Advocacy groups say the recession and the demolition of seedy hotels to make way for upscale condos have pushed the number closer to 3,000.

Activists for the homeless fear the real crisis will come in April, when all seven of the emergency shelters that were opened this winter will run out of funding. And the city has yet to find a way to pay for six of the new public-housing projects.

"Vancouver started down this road with [the World's Fair] Expo in 1986. We were told it would make us a world-class city. What it brought us was world-class housing prices and . . . world-class drug-dealing," said Judy Graves, the city's tenant assistance coordinator.

"One neighborhood after another has been gentrifying . . . to the point where we have only one neighborhood where the poor can afford to live – the downtown Eastside," Graves said. "And now gentrification is pushing at the downtown Eastside. And the Olympics, of course, will force the cost of land up again."

Vancouver had little or no homelessness problem 15 years ago. But Canada, like the U.S., moved to deinstitutionalize the mentally ill in the 1980s – and like the U.S., it provided few follow-up assistance programs. At the same time, the federal government got out of the business of building public housing, transferring responsibility to the provinces.

"People are kind of getting used to [homelessness], thinking, well, it's like prostitution or robbery, we're never going to be able to solve it," said Jill Davidson, the city's assistant housing director. "Well, we can solve it. Because we had it solved only 15 years ago."

In part to protest the billions of dollars being spent on the Vancouver Games, activists staged the Poverty Olympics here Sunday – featuring events such as a wrestling match between community members and a character called Mr. Condo.

"The kids end up defeating the developer," said one of the organizers, Wendy Pedersen. "That's the cathartic ending."

The Pivot Legal Society also is distributing 500 red pop-up tents to be erected as living quarters for the homeless in prominent places during the Olympics, which get underway Friday.

Hoping to tell their side of the story, the city and provincial governments – along with 30 nonprofit groups – opened an information center in the downtown Eastside with posters touting housing projects and community programs. "Learn about real people transforming lives in the face of daunting challenges," says a handout for Olympics visitors. "It's a story of hope, renewal and revitalization."

But many out-of-towners may not get much of a feel for the neighborhood. A special car lane will whisk athletes and VIPs past a vista of bottle-recycling centers and down-market sidewalk vendors. (Among the items a bearded man was offering for sale one recent afternoon were a computer monitor and a bundt cake.)

Visitors also may drive right by what used to be First United Church. After Bergman's death, the congregation decided to open the sanctuary 24 hours a day as a shelter that could accommodate about 300 homeless people. Several rows of pews were cleared out to make way for beds; sleeping bodies sprawl along the remaining benches.

"We became an indoor park," minister Ric Matthews said.

Shawn Bayes of the Elizabeth Fry Society of Greater Vancouver, which operates several women's shelters, said Bergman was among those who avoid co-ed shelters for fear of sexual assault, beatings and theft.

"When she got to the point that she really needed to feel safe," Bayes said, "she would come in and she would sleep for days."

Ellen Silvergieter, director of advocacy services at St. Paul's Anglican Church, said one of her outreach workers encountered Bergman the night she died.

"He tried to get her to go to a shelter. . . . She had mental health problems; she had addiction problems. She should have had some housing with some supports in place," Silvergieter said.

"There wasn't any. And there still isn't."

kim.murphy@latimes.com

Copyright © 2010, The Los Angeles Times

---

 E-mail  Print  Digg  Twitter  Facebook  StumbleUpon

---

COMMENTS (7) | Add Comment

Man, I like condos a lot better than I like the homeless. Too bad for those of us who take care of ourselves, pay our taxes, and don't live on the street, since the homeless always seem to win.
skraft77 (02/10/2010, 10:27 AM)

Report Comment

---

Vancouver's abject poverty and drug use gets a lot of media attention within and beyond Canada. In the Canadian papers there are exposes with titles like "Canada's Ghettos" etc. While Vancouver's homelessness might be very graphic and dire, it represents less than 1/3 of 1% of the population. In contrast, LA's permanently homeless population is over 2% of the population, with over 7% experiencing periods of homelessness throughout the year. If we reduced homelessness in LA to Vancouver rates we'd have less than 10,000 homeless rather than the 84,000 we have today.

frogsorsnakes (02/10/2010, 9:21 AM)

Report Comment

featuring events such as a wrestling match between community members and a character called Mr. Condo.

"The kids end up defeating the developer," said one of the organizers, Wendy Pedersen. "That's the cathartic ending."

cricket991 (02/10/2010, 3:05 AM)

Report Comment

See All comments

If you are under 13 years of age you may read this message board, but you may not participate. Here are the full legal terms you agree to by using this comment form. Comments are filtered for language and registration is required. Web and/or e-mail addresses are not permitted. Note: Comments are moderated and will not appear until they have been reviewed by Los Angeles Times staff.

L.A. Unleashed »

All things animal in California and beyond

advertisement

 2010 MALIBU LS

Low mileage lease example for qualified lessees

$199 for 39 plus $2,589
/month /months Due at Signing

Includes security deposit, Tax, title and dealer fees extra. Mileage charge of $0.20/mile over 39,000 miles. At participating dealers only. Example based on survey. Each dealer sets its own price. Your payments may vary. Payments are for a 2010 Malibu LS with an MSRP of $22,545. 39 monthly payments total $7,371. Option to purchase at lease end for an amount to be determined at lease signing. GMAC must approve lease. Lessee pays for excess wear. Not available with other offers. Residency restrictions apply. Take delivery by 3/1/10.

LEARN MORE →

The Latest | NEWS AS IT HAPPENS

Poll: Who should host the Emmys? - The Envelope - Ultimate Awards Site 02/10/2010, 11:07 a.m.

Ousted fund manager Gundlach files countersuit against TCW - Money & Company 02/10/2010, 10:48 a.m.

Obama administration expands sanctions against Iran - Babylon & Beyond 02/10/2010, 10:45 a.m.

Ellen era of 'American Idol' starts strong; 'Past Life' needs CPR; Leno fades away - Company Town 02/10/2010, 10:41 a.m.

Identity fraud on the rise — up 12% to 11.1 million adults affected in 2009 - Money & Company 02/10/2010, 10:39 a.m.

MOST VIEWED | MOST E-MAILED

Bernanke says Federal Reserve will scale back stimulus policies . . . eventually

Fatal avalanches on Afghan mountain road rivet nation

Rare earthquake rattles Chicago

U.S. military releases photographer held in Iraq for more than a year

'Pizza thief' walks the line

Land trust solicits funding to buy peak near Hollywood sign

Sri Lanka defends arrest of candidate Sarath Fonseka

Revising the book on mental illness

'The Wolfman' finally gets a chance to howl

Michael Jackson's doctor's case may hinge on his police statement

A vertical advertisement for the Chevrolet Silverado. At the top is the Chevrolet bowtie logo and the word "SILVERADO". Below that, a blue background contains the text: "The most dependable, longest lasting full-size pickups on the road.*". The central image shows a blue Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck parked on a dirt road in a field. At the bottom, there is a "LEARN MORE" button with a right-pointing arrow. A small asterisked note at the bottom left of the image reads: "* Dependability based on longevity: 1981-July 2008 full-size pickup registrations."

Artisan Liquor »

Small distilleries are navigating the market's shifting tide. Photos

Prickly Relationship »

The Long Beach Cactus Club has kept up a garden at Dominguez Rancho Adobe since 1974. Photos

---

In Case You Missed It...

Former shot-caller is now spilling gang's secrets

Review: Ed Harris stars in 'Wrecks' at the Geffen

In Haiti, some see the spirit world behind the quake

Top 100 travel photos from readers

Review: 'Staying True' by Jenny Sanford

Save more than 50% off the newsstand price. Click here to subscribe to The Times.

---

---

News

Local
U.S. & World
Business
Technology
Sports
Opinion
Columnists
Obituaries

Entertainment

Television
Movies
Music
Arts & Culture
Celebrity
The Envelope
Calendar
Company Town
TV Listings
Movie Listings
Tickets

Living

Travel
Health
Food
Home
Image
Magazine
Books
Autos
Hot List
Horoscopes
Crosswords

Multimedia

Video
Photos
Data Desk
Your Scene
Times on Twitter
RSS
Newsletters
Kindle
E-edition

Top Blogs

L. A. Now
Fabulous Forum
Ministry of Gossip
TV Show Tracker
Company Town
Politics
Music
Hero Complex
Technology
Movies

More

Corrections
Readers' Rep
Contact Us | Help
About Us
Events
LATMG Media Kit
Print Edition
Subscribe
Manage My Account
Site Map

---

Los Angeles Times

Coastline Pilot | Daily Pilot | Huntington Beach Independent | Valley Sun | Burbank Leader | News Press | KTLA | Hoy | Brand X | LA, Los Angeles Times Magazine | ZAP2it | Baltimore Sun | Chicago Tribune | CTnow | Daily Press | Hartford Courant | Los Angeles Times | Orlando Sentinel | Sun Sentinel | The Morning Call |

Terms of Service | Privacy Policy | Los Angeles Times, 202 West 1st Street, Los Angeles, California, 90012 | Copyright 2010

A Tribune Web site

